Pharmacy Student Ambassador Network (PSAN)

The University of Iowa College of Pharmacy

Members of PSAN serve as representatives of the College of Pharmacy to reach prospective high school and college students. The group is made up of volunteers from all cohorts. One of the Ambassadors major responsibilities is to provide tours of the college to interested high schools and transfer students. This provides applicants with an opportunity to interact with current pharmacy students and to gain insight into a typical student's life. Prospective students also receive more information about the curriculum, facilities, and the admissions process.

PHARMACY STUDENTS GRADUATE EARLY TO WORK ON THE COVID-19 FRONT LINES

Pharmacy students across the country (at schools like Rutgers University's Ernest Mario School of Pharmacy, Manchester University's College of Pharmacy, Natural & Health Sciences, and Purdue University's College of Pharmacy) were gearing up to graduate from their PharmD programs in early May. Things took a unique turn when the COVID-19 pandemic began to spread in the United States. Seeing a high demand for pharmacy-related services, pharmacy students began to volunteer to fast track their graduation so they could begin working on the front lines. News outlets across the country have been sharing stories about these students and their extraordinary commitment to making the world a healthier place during this unprecedented time.
